Dear Greg and Gabriel,

We thought we would drop you a note. Three months after moving into our new home everything is working really quite well and our geothermal system is working as promised. We've noticed that our home has actually become more comfortable too.

As we've told you in the past, the first real confirmation of our decision to undertake your recommendations for efficiency work came this past winter as we were nearing the end of our construction work. We noticed immediately the difference the additional insulation made even without the heating system being operable. We can imagine the impact this will have on our energy bills in future years.

We appreciate the attention you showed our project. When issues arose - as they always do - they were dealt with quickly. We also appreciate the guidance you provided as we navigated this new terrain of 'green building', its various technologies and the available grant programs which made our decision to undertake this project even more attractive.

We have watched the dramatic price increases with energy over the past few months with a certain degree of comfort knowing that our decision to build a green home will serve us well into the future.

Thank you for everything.

Sincerely,

Anthony and Denise Cooper
